WHERE WATER FINDS ITS COLOR

Barlavento is the windward side, where the wind arrives first, and the name of the Caribbean islands whose coral, volcanic rock and fossil sand settle into the water and color it.

FIVE WATERS

Blanc, Gris, Lagoon, Sea, Caribbean. Not five tiles but five depths: the pale shallows, the stone bed, the green lagoon, the open sea, and the blue that named the Caribbean. The surface decides which one the water becomes.

A POOL IS NOT A PLANE.

It is a curve, a lip, a step, a corner, and a line where water meets air. Barlvento is built as a system, with corner pieces and edge solutions in every tone, so the material holds continuity exactly where the geometry becomes difficult.

THE COLOR OF WATER IS A DESIGN DECISION.

Architects have always known a pool's color is specified, not found. Barlavento returns that decision to the drawing, with five graded tones and a system complete enough to carry one intention from the waterline to the last corner.
